Training, we got it.

If you have raced with men on foot and they have worn you out, How will you compete with horses?
Jeremiah 12: 5

I want to serve. Is there a code?

Great Question. There's no code but there is a "Pledge" at Sentinelforchrist.com. Review it. Consider if any principle resonates more than others. That may be the cue of where to focus your efforts.

- Stay plugged into your church, in personal fellowship with other men and in the Word, transparently (Principle 10)
- Be willing to have activities outside of your groups meetings. Have coffee, go to an event.
- Tailor your group to the community and men you associate with. Make it personal. There's nothing wrong with having a mission statement.
- Be willing to serve others that are wounded. Even the most seasoned man can have a trial in life that redefines everything.
- Consider being a comrade to a fellow man that might be going through a tough time for a few months. Ask for training on how to be a "Sentinel Servant."
- Serve for the right reason. "Devotion to God is the only acceptable motivation for service," J. Bridges. Don't make your immediate or extended family strangers or orphans! Jesus attracted people to Himself through His wiliness to be vulnerable.
- Watch for growth opportunities. There's no such thing as service without personal growth.
- Use the resources or develop your own. We got a spiritual gift inventory, recommended readings, blog opportunities and more at SENTINELFORCHRIST.COM

How to reach out with meaning

Be available, be authentic. None of us has all the answers. Camaraderie in Christ is the driving force behind service. Your impact won't be because you have amazing answers or extensive experience as much as it will be just being available in friendship. The impact of your group will only be as strong as the relationships between men. Service is meant to be a joy, not a burden!

SFC helps men grow and break free of the past through camaraderie with other men so we flourish in our relationship with God and the people God has placed in our lives. Many of us have pushed through life adversity or personal loss by several years while some are just starting their journey all are welcome.
